He worked at the Amoco Plant in Seymour as an engineer and supervisor. In 1978, he relocated to Monroe, Ga., and then Orlando Fla., to help set up new Amoco plants.

He thoroughly enjoyed the travel, promotion of speaking in churches, doing conventions, speaking at vacation Bible schools, church camps and anything else the Lord led him to do for others. One of his favorite things was to be of encouragement to young ministers.

Born March 28, 1935, in Chicago, he was the son of Merrill and Audrey Dugan, both of whom preceded him in death. On May 15, 1965, he married Virginia Lee Watson Webber, who survives.
