She had been in failing health for a long time, but was able to be up and about until last Thursday, when she was taken to her bed. Several years ago she lost her eyesight, but during her long affliction she was ever patient and kind. Being of a jovial disposition she was quick to make friends of those with whom she came in contact and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. She was a good wife and mother and a kind, obliging friend and neighbor. In her girlhood days she united with the Christian church and remained a
