Farmer, Dies Of Heart Attack

Andrew J. Wolka, age 48, died suddenly Sunday afternoon at the home of his brother-in-law, Lemma Cross, north of the Ratcliff Grove church where he and his wife and daughter had gone to spend the afternoon. About 4:30 o'clock Mr. Wolka remarked they had better start home and just as he stepped into the kitchen, he fell dead. He had not complained any and seemed in his usual health. His death was attributed to a heart attack, and came as a shock to his relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Christian church this afternoon at 2 o'clock in charge of the pastor, the Rev. John U. Phelps. Burial in Fairview cemetery.

He was born in Jackson county September 6, 1897, the son of Fred and Anna Waldkoetter Wolka, both deceased. On October 9, 1918, he was married in Brownstown to Carrie Phillips, who survives. He was a farmer and was well known. He was a member of the Christian church.

Besides the widow he is survived by one daughter, Carolyn Wolka, at home. Two sisters, Mrs. Henry Terkhorn, of Brownstown, and Mrs. Jesse Lewis of Indianapolis, also survive.
